Billix printable · A year of bills

Monthly Bill Tracker

See a full year of household bills in one place, so you know which bills matter most, when they peak, and what to work on first.

How to use it

1. Fill in the provider directory once, from your latest bills.
2. Print the monthly page 12 times. Log each bill as it arrives, and do that month's seasonal check.
3. Copy each month's totals to the year at a glance. Add each column and each row.

Good to know

Start with a year of bills

Gather up to 12 months of bills for every service. Annualize each one from actual bills: the total of the last 12 monthly bills, 6 two-month bills or 4 quarterly bills, every delivery in the last 12 months, or the yearly charge.

Included in rent or dues

For a service included in rent, taxes or HOA dues, use the amount the statement shows, or write "included". If you have only one or two bills, estimate the year and mark it ESTIMATED

The two calculations

Monthly average = year total ÷ 12

Share of total = the service's year total ÷ the household's year total × 100

Enter bills in the month they arrive

Enter each bill's total in the month it was billed. Where a bill covers two months, such as many water bills, enter it in the month it arrives and note the period.

Catch the dates that cost money

Add your own dates to the 12-month calendar, then do each month's seasonal check. State dates vary; check yours.

Reading your results

Start your savings work with the services that take the largest share. A month far above that service's average, without a weather or household reason, is worth a 15-Minute Bill Audit (B2).

Marginal price: add up every per-unit rate on your bill; on a tiered bill, use your top tier's rate (1.8, Rule 2). Without tiers, it is close to the 15-Minute Bill Audit's price per unit (B2).
